

Only Oregon Voters Know Winner Stassen-Dewey Debate

PORLTAND, Ore., May 18— Both Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Harold E. Stassen claimed victory today following their radio debate on whether the Communist party should be outlawed.

Dewey commented:

"Never before did I experience a debate in which my opponent surrendered in the middle."

Stassen said:

"Gov. Dewey walked around the issue twice."

The most impressive answer will be given at the Oregon primary Friday, when the state's Republicans choose between the two aspirants for President.

Each camp forecasts a majority. Only 12 delegates will be at stake, but advisors have told both rivals that the prestige that goes to the winner may bring him the Republican nomination.

The debate, carried by major networks, was held in studios of Station KEX in Portland. The audience consisted of 45 party and news representatives, in addition to about 30 reporters who worked behind a glass partition.

Stassen, who urged a law to make Communist organizations illegal, made his comment about Dewey's position on the grounds that the New York governor had refused to say "yes" or "no" to the Mundt-Nixon bill now in Congress. In his speech, Stassen said:

"If Mr. Dewey agrees to support that bill, I will consider that he has agreed that the Communist party should be outlawed, and we can go on to the important issues."

Stassen claimed that the bill would outlaw the Communist party and quoted William Z. Foster, head of the party in this country, and Louis Buderz, reformed Communist, in support.

Dewey denied that it would outlaw the party and quoted

Rep. Mundt (R-SD) and the congressional committee sponsoring the bill for backing. He said:

"Mr. Stassen has demanded from Oregon to New Jersey that the Communist party be outlawed. Now he says he will be satisfied with a bill that does not outlaw the party."

The 1944 presidential nominee said the bill is "probably harmless and may help a little" but expressed doubt that it would be constitutional. It may help keep the Communists "out in the open, because the main provision is to make them register," he asserted. As for other provisions, he commented:

"If they are constitutional, they are swell."

The two aspirants could not agree either, on whether the Communist party was outlawed in Russia before the Red revolution of 1917. Dewey said Communist leaders were outlawed, sent to Siberia and shot." To support this he quoted the House un-American Activities Committee.

Stassen quoted Communist leaders, on the other hand, as saying the party operated openly and elected six members of the Russian parliament in 1912.

In his rebuttal, Stassen asked why Communists made New York their headquarters if present laws are adequate. He said only one Communist has been convicted in the state in the last eight years, and that was a libel case.

In his sur-rebuttal, Dewey replied:

"We've had a tough fight, but we've licked them."

Stassen declared that the Mundt-Nixon bill will be "a precedent for other freedom-loving countries" and declared:

"A soft policy of coddling Communism with legality wins neither peace, respect nor improvement from Communists."

Civil Contempt Citation Lifted From John Lewis

'Public Interest Secure,' Claim; Judge Makes Injunction Stick

WASHINGTON, May 18— Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough today dismissed without penalty a civil contempt citation against John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers but refused to lift the 80-day injunction against a new coal strike.

Goldsborough dismissed the civil contempt citation at the government's request but declined immediate dismissal of the anti-strike injunction issued April 23, despite Justice department assurance that "the public interest is now secure" against a further coal walkout.

Meanwhile, Lewis and the soft coal operators opened a new contract battle. The UMW president met briefly with the operators but the session was adjourned after less than 30 minutes.

Harvey Cartwright, Indiana coal operator, was chosen chairman of the contract conference, in which Lewis succeeded at least temporarily in barring Joseph E. Moody from the important committee on rules and procedure.

MOODY, a longtime foe of the union leader, is president of the Southern Coal Operators.

Judge Goldsborough replied acutely to the government's argument that "the union is now back at work and will not strike regardless of the outcome" of litigation still pending in the pension dispute which led to the recent 29-day walkout. The judge snapped:

"The court doesn't think there is any force in your statement at all."

Dismissal of the civil contempt matter had no effect on the fines of $20,000 against Lewis and $1,400,000 against the union imposed for criminal contempt.

Goldsborough said he "doesn't think for one moment that the pension dispute is dissolved."

He pointed out that Ezra Van Horn, operators trustee on the WASHINGTON, May 18— The United States is determined today to ignore all Russian requests for bilateral negotiation of Soviet-American differences and will seek any settlement through established United Nations procedure.

This is the reaction in top government circles to Generalissimo Josef Stalin's endorsement of Henry A. Wallace's proposal of U.S.-Soviet amity talks.

The State department declined to comment on Stalin's message to Wallace, but some diplomatic quarters regard the Soviet leader's individualistic approach on high international policy as "most unusual."

Railroad Strike Parley Runs On; Accord Unseen

WASHINGTON, May 18— Railroad union and management representatives conferred for two hours and 15 minutes today on their wage dispute with no progress toward settlement of the controversy.

Anavian Johnston, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, told newsmen that the resumption of bargaining talks requested by the presidential assistant, Dr. John R. Steelman, involved "a general discussion of the entire question."

The negotiations were to meet again this afternoon.

Spokesmen for the railroads declined to comment on the morning session. Johnston was asked whether the group had made any progress toward settlement. He replied:

"No, we haven't arrived at anything definite."

Far East Aid Asked

$220 Million Fund Sought By Army

WASHINGTON, May 18—The administration has asked Congress to appropriate $220 million to finance a Far Eastern recovery program for Japan, South Korea and the Ryukyu Islands.

The request was submitted to the House appropriations committee by the Army. A committee source revealed today that it is now under consideration by the deficiency subcommittee, which is holding closed-door hearings on foreign aid funds.

Congress never has authorized the expenditure of funds for a Far Eastern recovery program for the occupied areas.

Rep. Vorys, (R) Ohio, acting at the request of the Army, proposed that it be included in the six billion ninety-eight million dollar economic cooperation act approved by Congress last month. The Vorys plan fell through, however, reportedly because of State department opposition.

DESPISE this, it was disclosed that the committee has been asked by the Army to include the funds in the one-package multi-billion dollar foreign aid appropriation bill.

The state police forces were concentrated at the Chrysler Highland Park plant where four persons were injured yesterday in wild fighting between local police and 500 massed pickets.

Thirteen cars of troopers moved into the plant early today, accompanied by 30 highland park officers.

A company spokesman said the entire staff of 4,000 office employees and supervisory help was on the job.

The committee source stated that it was in addition to the one billion 220 million dollars previously asked by the Army for relief for all occupied areas.

He added that while the committee was authorized to appropriate funds "to feed the people" in occupied areas it had no authority to furnish money for recovery purposes.

He asserted that the Army's request would, in effect, extend the ECA to Japan, Korea and the Ryukyu.

The new request would bring to eight billion 18 million dollars the amount requested by President Truman for foreign aid for the 1949 fiscal year beginning July 1.

Cool Weather Due Wednesday

The Ohio weather was a little cooler Tuesday, with the weather bureau forecasting light frost in the northeastern section below the Geauga and Lake County lines.

Weather bureau forecasters said temperatures Tuesday night would hover in the 40s in the northern section and near 50 in the south. No rain was sighted until late Thursday.

The weather bureau's five-day outlook for Ohio follows:

"Temperatures will average near normal during the period. Warmer Thursday; cooler Friday and Saturday; showers late Thursday and again about Saturday. Total rainfall about one-half inch."

Contempt Writ Lifted Off Lewis

THE JUDGE declared that in view of the legal battle over the pension fund there is a question as to whether the government's motion for dismissal of the injunction is "premature."

The government's motions were presented by Assistant Attorney General H. Graham Morrison and Joseph Friedman, special assistant to Attorney General Tom Clark.

Morrison told the court that "it is abundantly clear" that "the public interest is now secure against cessation of full production in the bituminous coal mines of the nation" and that the civil contempt conviction and injunction should be dismissed.

The Justice department lawyer argued that the pension controversy, which provoked the March-April mine shutdown, is now "settled" and under the Taft-Hartley Law the attorney general is required to move for dismissal of the anti-strike order.

"It now appears that the dispute which gave rise to the concerted walkout of the miners in the bituminous coal mines in this case has been appropriately submitted for legal adjudication.

"The evidence is that the union is now back at work and will not strike regardless of the outcome of that litigation."

The jurist asked the government to submit a brief on its motion for dismissal of the injunction and said he would take the motion under advisement.

THE COURT agreed, however, to dismissal of the civil contempt conviction which was imposed against Lewis and the union last month for failing to obey promptly a temporary restraining order to call off the pension strike.

Judge Goldsborough said he believed the preliminary injunction "now in effect will serve every purpose that continuation of the civil contempt proceedings would serve."

Morrison said: "The United States has but one interest in this case and that is to protect the public interest against the catastrophe of work stoppage in this vital industry."

"It now appears that the underlying dispute which led to this work stoppage has been channeled into an appropriate forum for disposition."

Court Dismisses Damage Action

Settlement out of court caused the dismissal Monday of two damage suits totalling $5,880 which had been placed on file April 26 in Pickaway County common pleas court against Ralph E. Crook of Lancaster.

Actions were instigated by Raymond C. Wilson of Washington C. H. who was asking for $5,250 and a $630 damage claim filed by Harold Gordon of Washington C. H.

Litigation followed a truck-into-a-collision last September on U. S. Route 22, east of Circleville, when Crook allegedly rammed a truck driven by Wilson and owned by Gordon.

Spangler Estate Sale Is Sought

Administrators for the Catharine Spangler estate have petitioned in Pickaway County probate court for permission to sell two lots of the estate in East Ringgold to pay debts.

Russell and Chester Spangler, co-administrators, claim in their petition a total of $500 is owed by the Spangler estate while personal property evaluation was set at $315.38.

Appraisal value of the two lots was set at $2,633.34, the petition claims and the property sale has been sanctioned by five heirs of the estate.

POLITICAL CONVENTION STILL WEEKS AWAY BUT PHILADELPHIA BUZZES WITH ACTIVITY

CONVENTION HALL—Here, in Philadelphia, the next president of the United States will be nominated.

By ESTHER V. W. TUFTY

Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Philadelphia is already an occupied city. Republican and Democratic delegates will not arrive until June 21 and July 12 to pick the next presidential candidates. But last October, the Republicans established a beachhead. In December, the Democrats went in with a task force.

Today, both have headquarters in the beautiful "Republican-looking" Bellevue-Stratford hotel and there is much advance busyness to secure housing, badges, palms and other details which go with nominating a president in a democracy.

The real occupation will come when the press moves in—some two days before each convention.

Three thousand newspaper reporters are expected (one and a fourth reporter to each delegate). Harold Beckley, press superintendent of the convention, says there will be 845 press seats on the press stand; 200 radio, and 75 for magazine and periodical writers.

However, this does not include all the desk men, telegraph operators, and "leg men" who will not work in Convention auditorium itself.

FOR THE FIRST TIME on a large scale, the conventions will be televised, requiring a minimum of 300 men—engineers and interviewers. Major networks have already divided up the days of each convention to televise the main proceedings.

Each network will have on-the-spot television from hotel rooms and lobbies so Americans can actually see the "smoke-filled rooms" of a national convention. The shows will be transcribed directly on the east coast, re-broadcast to Chicago and the west coast.

A museum, adjacent to Convention hall, has been rigged up for television to hold the overflow which the auditorium will not house.

Naturally, the candidates have been busy. An unconfirmed but persistent rumor has it that Harold E. Stassen has reserved the best suite in the Bellevue-Stratford for campaign headquarters and that his backers have a strangle-hold on some 40 rooms to divvy out to strategic and potential backers.

THE 1948 POLITICAL conventions promise to be flamboyant with color. Badges will be elaborate for the first time with the war. Large in size, they will carry a Philadelphia motif.

Scores of bands in the area are "on call," some already quietly signed by candidates. Philadelphia's taxicabs are being recruited and will be "free" to the press.

Entertainment promises to be flamboyant, too, and plentiful. The Pennsylvania railroad will, as usual, have a room near the Convention hall for the press with free beer, sandwiches and television for relaxation.

Mrs. Worthington Scranton, well-known Pennsylvania Republican, is arranging an extensive hospital program for the Republican convention. As "official hostess," she has a large corps of volunteers which will have information booths in department stores and hotels to aid the out-of-town visitors.

Washington's No. 1 party giver, Mrs. Perle Mesta, is a delegate from Rhode Island for the Democratic convention. Her customary parties at both conventions are expected to get a repeat.

Apparently the only detail overlooked is the Philadelphia water—notorious around the world—which was aptly described by one wag as "the only water in the world which you have to chew."

U.S. Ignores Red Moves

"But as far as the government of the USSR is concerned, it considers that Wallace's program could serve as a good, fruitful basis for such an agreement and for the development of international cooperation, despite the differences in economic systems."

Wallace's program was included in an "open letter" to Stalin, presented at a third-party rally at New York's Madison Square Garden, a week ago.

The former vice-president called for a "fully reported, open meeting" of American and Soviet representatives.

Wallace also called for: Armament reduction, resumption of free trade; free movement of students, citizens and newspapermen; aid to war-damaged nations through the United Nations; speedy peace treaties for Germany and Japan; evacuation of American and Russian troops from Korea and China; non-intervention in the domestic affairs of individual nations.

THE STALIN letter marked the second time in the last 10 days in which a top-ranking Soviet official has indicated Russia's willingness to "talk things over."

Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, in a reply to a note from Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith also expressed the view that the USSR was agreeable to what it interpreted as an American bid for a two-power parity. Some diplomatic circles in Washington thought Stalin's note was an attempt by Moscow to bolster Wallace's opposition to U. S. foreign policy and an undisguised plan to needle the U. S. government.

This cold war attack is said to be motivated by the vast American rearment program coupled with the large-scale European Recovery Program which Moscow has sought to undermine since its inception.

It is generally understood that the apple was first grown in south-western Asia and southern Europe.

Three thousand newspaper reporters are expected (one and a fourth reporter to each delegate). Harold Beckley, press superintendent of the convention, says there will be 845 press seats on the press stand; 200 radio, and 75 for magazine and periodical writers.

However, this does not include all the desk men, telegraph operators, and "leg men" who will not work in Convention auditorium itself.

FOR THE FIRST TIME on a large scale, the conventions will be televised, requiring a minimum of 300 men—engineers and interviewers. Major networks have already divided up the days of each convention to televise the main program.

Special elevators are under construction to carry ice to the cooling-system expected to keep the "hot" conventions cooler.

Convention hall holds 13,000 people. Admittance will be by ticket only. First choice goes to the delegates. (The Republicans have 2,100 delegates and alternates; the Democrats have 3,192.)

Next priority goes to distinguished guests (senators, congressmen, former national committee on the east coast, re-broadcast to Chicago and the west coast.

A museum, adjacent to Convention hall, has been rigged up for television to hold the overflow which the auditorium will not house.

Naturally, the candidates have been busy. An unconfirmed but persistent rumor is it that Harold E. Stassen has reserved the best suite in the Bellevue-Stratford for campaign headquarters and that his backers have a strangle-hold on some 40 rooms to divvy out to strategists and potential backers.

THE 1948 POLITICAL conventions promise to be flamboyant with color. Badges will be elaborate for the first time since the war. Large in size, they will carry a Philadelphia motif.

Scores of bands in the area are "on call," some already quietly signed by candidates. Philadelphia's taxicabs are being recruited and will be "free" to the press.

Entertainment promises to be flamboyant, too, and plentiful. The Pennsylvania railroad will, as usual, have a room near the Convention hall for the press with free beer, sandwiches and television for relaxation.

Mrs. Worthington Scranton, well-known Pennsylvania Republican, is arranging an extensive hospitality program for the Republican convention. As "official hostess," she has a large corps of volunteers which will have information booths in department stores and hotels to aid the out-of-town visitors.

Washington's No. 1 party giver, Mrs. Perle Mesta, is a delegate from Rhode Island for the Democratic convention. Her customary parties at both conventions are expected to get a repeat.

Apparently the only detail overlooked is the Philadelphia water-notorious around-the-world—which was aptly described by one wag "As the only water in the world which you have to chew."

"But as far as the government of the USSR is concerned, it considers that Wallace's program could serve as a good, fruitful basis for such an agreement and for the development of international cooperation, despite the differences in economic systems."

Wallace's program was included in an "open letter" to Stalin, presented at a third-party rally at New York's Madison Square Garden, a week ago.

The former vice-president called for a "fully reported, open meeting" of American and Soviet representatives.

Wallace also called for:

Arment reduction, resumption of free trade; free movement of students, citizens and newspapermen; aid to war-damaged nations through the United Nations; speedy peace treaties for Germany and Japan; evacuation of American and Russian troops from Korea and China; non-intervention in the domestic affairs of individual nations.

THE STALIN letter marked the second time in the last 10 days in which a top-ranking Soviet official has indicated Russia's willingness to "talk things over."

Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov, in a reply to a note from Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith also expressed the view that the USSR was agreeable to what is interpreted as an American bid for a two-power parity.

Some diplomatic circles in Washington thought Stalin's note was an attempt by Moscow to bolster Wallace's opposition to U. S. foreign policy and an undisguised plan to needle the U. S. government.

This cold war attack is said to be motivated by the vast American rearmament program coupled with the large-scale European Recovery Program which Moscow has sought to undermine since its inception.

Local Woman Gets High Post In Demo Poll

The forces of former Gov. Frank J. Lausche took over virtually complete control of the Democratic state organization Tuesday.

Eugene Hanhart, 45-year-old Dover insurance man and hand-picked Lausche choice, was unanimously elected party chairman as the state central committee elected at the May 4 primary held its organization meeting in Columbus Monday.

Among the 12 vice-chairmen who will aid Hanhart in planning this year's state campaign is Mrs. Olivia Talbot Hayes of Circleville.

The control was completed when a full slate of Lausche supporters was elected to office, and the 44-member central committee then handed over its functions to a new executive committee composed of central committee members plus 35 at-large members nominated by Hanhart.

All elections were unanimous. There was not the slightest opposition to any of the Lausche program.

As chairman, Hanhart succeeds Albert A. Horstman of Dayton. Horstman, who supported Lausche's unsuccessful primary opponent, Ray T. Miller, stepped down voluntarily and was not a candidate for reelection to the post he held eight years.

Red Cross Unit Here Meets Goal Set At $8,580

Pickaway County chapter of American Red Cross closed its 1948 fund campaign this week by announcing it had exceeded its national goal of $8,580 by $26.96.

Brooms are then allowed to stand 24 hours to dry and then are placed in a vice press to insure perfect shape and balance.

Sale of the brooms is being aided by several Zanesville service clubs and civic groups in and around the city. Reception given the products will guide the state in other projects to be undertaken.

The forces of former Gov. Frank J. Lausche took over virtually complete control of the Democratic state organization Tuesday.

Eugene Hanhart, 45, a 40-year-old Dover insurance man and hand-picked Lausche choice, was unanimously elected party chairman as the state central committee elected at the May 4 primary held its organization meeting in Columbus Monday.

Miss Pauline Roese, Pickaway County case worker for aid to the blind service, said broommaking is especially adaptable to persons with defective vision.

With proper training, the sightless are able to produce brooms of equal quality as those made by normal workers.

All persons with less than the maximum vision allowed to be declared technically blind are eligible for physical examination, diagnosis, medical and surgical correction whenever possible with vocational training available by the state.

The department of public welfare supplies Goodwill Industries with examinations, treatment and training facilities and provides the blind workers with board and room.

Broommaking begins with the process of sorting and grading of broom corn. At Goodwill, workers are supplied with Linden corn, the finest quality available for making carpet brooms.

THE STRAWS are sorted by lengths, and all inferior corn removed. Then follows the building, combing and removal of seeds and broken shafts.

In the sewing machine, hardwood handles are placed in the chuck and straws attached by winding the stalk end of the corn and wire around the handle. Staples are used to insure a secure fastening.

Brooms are then allowed to stand 24 hours to dry and then are placed in a vice press to insure perfect shape and balance.

Sale of the brooms is being aided by several Zanesville service clubs and civic groups in and around the city. Reception given the products will guide the state in other projects to be undertaken.

SECRECY IN GOVERNMENT

SUPPORTERS of the proposal, now approved by the House, to force government agencies to open their secret files to Congress on demand say it is needed to obtain information required to draft and enact intelligent laws. If their claim is well grounded, they have excellent cause for bringing about some changes in the execution branch of the government, but not necessarily for changing the basic structure of the laws surrounding government operation.

Thoughtful consideration of the problem must lead to the conclusion that some of the functions of government agencies need the protection of secrecy. The interests, even the safety, of the nation may require it.

It should be the duty of responsible officials to provide honestly to Congress, under the protection of the closed and confidential hearing if needed, enough information about secret functions to enable Congress to do its work. But it is highly questionable whether such officials should be required to answer any question, without qualification, or produce any document which might be requested.

If the House distrusts the motives or information of an official, it has the power to seek impeachment of that official, and should do so. It does not seem that the House has made a sound case for spilling the secret files of government indiscriminately over the tables of its numerous investigating committees.

What is the significance of the fact that this important proposal was debated and voted in the House on strictly party lines? Is it a punitive measure? Whatever may be behind the party-line division of opinion, it suggests that the matter might better wait until the elections are disposed of.

WHY NOT BELIEVE HIM?

WHAT does a man have to say to be believed? Gen. Eisenhower refused to be a candidate for the Republican nomination in language as clear and precise as could be. Talk still continued, this time by the Democrats. Now, about to assume the presidency of Columbia University, Eisenhower has been asked again by reporters to state his stand. He said positively that it was just the same as when he wrote his famous letter, that his position had not altered in any way. Why not take him at his word?

Sometimes in our less buoyant moods we sort of wonder whether, after all, the world might not get along about as well if we still played checkers.

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—Mr. Garry Moore, by profession a radio comedian, seated himself on a red sofa in his suite at the Gotham and talked of F. Scott Fitzgerald. Mr. Moore was wearing an ivory-colored bathrobe, crew haircut and a pair of thick tortoise-shell glasses, and he flexed and curled his bare feet constantly on the gray carpet as if he were trying to pick up quarters with his toes. Ordinarily, Mr. Moore is imbued with a kind of genial cynicism, but he was all seriousness as he poked back into his memory 14 years to the time when he was Fitzgerald's collaborator.

The time was 1934 and the scene was Baltimore. Mr. Moore, in his own words, "had about as much right to collaborate with Scott Fitzgerald as I do today with Tennessee Williams."

Our funnyman-to-be was 19 and still attending City College, a high school in Baltimore with a misleading name. He had done the book for a little theater revue, one of the songs of which had been composed by Zelda Fitzgerald, the writer's ill-starred wife who only a few weeks ago was burned to death in an insane asylum. Through Zelda he met Fitzgerald. Scott just had been named executor of Ring Lardner's estate, and had uncovered some one-act plays which he thought might make an evening of theater along with one of the Grand Guignol horror plays from France.

Fitzgerald invited young Moore to help him in weaving the dramas together, and for the next several months they worked almost nightly at Fitzgerald's home in Baltimore's "Little Virginia."

"That is, we tried to work," Garry recalled. "Scott was a moody man and he would sit by the hour, sometimes until three in the morning, castigating himself for what he considered his failures as a writer."

"I'm no good," he would say. "I'll never be any good. I'm a fake, a phony, a disappointment." Personally, I didn't know if he was right or not. I only knew Scott Fitzgerald as a man who wrote for the magazines—a good set of coattails to which to hang onto."

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Really great Presidents seek to preserve orderly government within the Constitutional framework. Ours is a peculiar type of government, doctrinaire in many respects, particularly in the division of powers among the Executive, the Legislative and the Judicial.

The theory is that by means of this division of powers, tyranny becomes impossible. A process of checks and balances was instituted in the hope that no one man or one part of the government would act willfully, in opposition to the rights and interest of the people.

The extreme New Dealers have regarded this form of government as confusing and expensive. Their objective has been a concentration of power in the Executive, Congress becoming a "rubber stamp," and the courts, instruments of the presidential will. The "rubber stamp" Congress, in theory, would be closer to the British parliament than to traditional American representative government. The President would, in effect, control the Congress as the prime minister controls parliament.

The fallacy in all this is that whereas the members of the British parliament represent a political party in the House of Commons and each man only himself in the House of Lords, a member of the American Senate represents the sovereign state which chooses him and a member of the House of Representatives is the representative of the whole of a particular constituency irrespective of party.

The British parliamentary system makes the government, in both its legislative and executive functions, the activity of a majority party. The judiciary is separate, permanent, and non-political. In the United States, the political party is not much more than a vehicle for the election of officials; in office, each official functions individually. Thus, when votes are counted in either the Senate or the House of Representatives, it is not unusual to find members of either party on the opposite side of the party's leadership.

Mr. Truman assumes, for the Executive, an authority which is British rather than American. He regards the Republican Congress as a personal opposition and he fights it politically. Congress has shown unusual forbearance on its treatment of the Executive. For instance, Averell Harriman, on orders of the President, declined to give a congressional committee information which it rightly desired in pursuit of its legislative business. The speaker of the House could have sent a sergeant-at-arms to arrest Harriman, bring him before the House, give him an opportunity to purge himself of contempt, and if not, to keep him under arrest until he did purge himself. It is not necessary for the House to go through any judicial branch of the Government.

The fact of the matter is that Truman is loyally trying to cover up the errors of the Roosevelt administration, particularly as regards the conduct of the war. Personal loyalty is no substitute for orderly government.

Probably, as a minister says, "preaching cannot stop war." But it can help to keep alive the best that is in the human race.

"It was a shame in a way; I had no idea of his greatness as a writer, and I considered him only a reasonably nice guy with a few words. 'The Beautiful and the Damned,' 'This Side of Paradise'—I'd never heard of them. It was a shame."

THOSE WERE THE DAYS WHEN FITZGERALD, never exactly a temperate man, was hitting it pretty hard. Garry will not talk of this, for publication. Nevertheless, it must have made a deep impression on him; remember, he was 19.

Ultimately, the collaboration drew out to a successful end and the little plays were taped up and patched together in presentable form. "By that time, I, who had started as a collaborator, had become Scott's bus boy. I drove him here and there and did errands for him. Fitzgerald used to call me 'My son, my son' except when, in the early morning hours, I did something that displeased him, at which time he amended that title somewhat," Moore said.

"I guess I only picked up one good piece of advice from him. He took up a thick manuscript to show me one night and then threw it in a wastebasket. 'Moore,' he said solemnly, 'you'll never be a writer until you have the guts to take a book you've written—and throw it in the ashcan.'

"Years later, H. L. Mencken told me I'd never be a good writer until I had ulcers. The prospect looked pretty dismal, so I became a radio comic."

THE COLLABORATION, ALTHOUGH COMPLETED, never rang the bell. Fitzgerald sent it to a number of producers, but the only thing notable about their negative answers was one from Jed Harris complaining of Scott's formality.

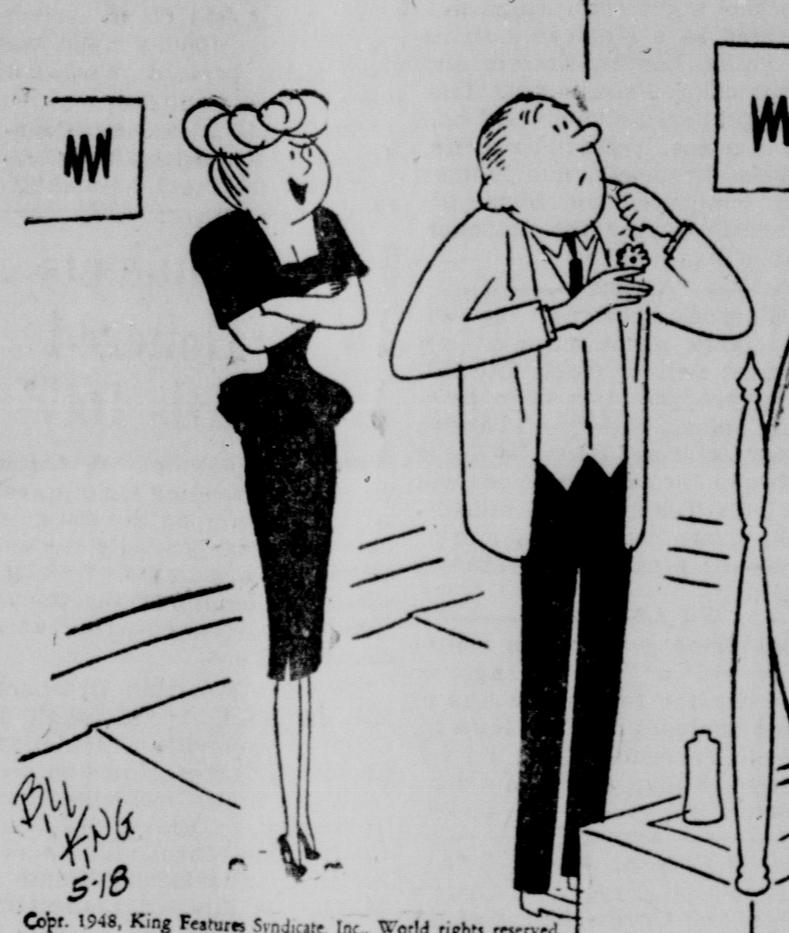

"I trust a writer to write a business-like letter," Harris wrote, sourly. By this time, young Garry had quit high school and had gotten a job on a Baltimore radio station, and from there he began the slow haul to the top.

Moore now is the star of the quiz show "Take It or Leave It," and he dates his success back to the time when he discovered the man from Brooklyn. "Just get a man up in front of a mike and have him say he's from Brooklyn, and your show is a laugh riot," Moore says weary.

As for Scott Fitzgerald—that was the year, 1934, when the book some consider his finest appeared, "Tender Is the Night." Shortly afterward, he went to Hollywood to write for the movies, and he wrote a magical, brilliant, sad essay for a magazine called "The Crack-up," in which he told of his disintegration as a writer, a man and an idealist.

"I think," he wrote, "that in an adult desire to be finer in grain than you are, a constant striving (as those people say who gain their bread by saying it) only adds to this unhappiness in the end—the end that comes to our youth and hope." On Dec. 21, 1940, he died.

DIET AND HEALTH

Similar Symptoms That Make The Doctor's Job Difficult

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

NOWHERE, not even at a twins' convention, are there more "look-alikes" than in the world of medicine. One disease can imitate another so perfectly as to "fool the experts," unless a very thorough examination is made.

One of these traditional "foolers" is a bowel disorder due to what are known as diverticula, which can, on occasion, duplicate either the symptoms of gallstones or those of stomach ulcer.

Walls Become Weakened

Sometimes the walls of the first part of the bowel known as the duodenum become weakened and, as a result, a little out-pouching occurs, such as may develop in a weak spot in an automobile tire. These out-pouchings are called diverticula.

Such diverticula may be present without causing symptoms. However, in most cases, they do cause trouble, and, as I said earlier, the symptoms may be much like those of other digestive disorders.

Pain and Tenderness

These symptoms consist of pain and tenderness in the abdomen, sickness at the stomach, and diarrhea. The pain may be in the right lower part of the abdomen. It may go to the back or at times into the right shoulder. The pain is apparently made worse by eating. In some cases, nausea or sickness at the stomach may accompany the pain or may occur at other times. Now and then, the diverticula press on the bile duct which empties into the intestine and, as a consequence, the flow of bile is blocked, resulting in jaundice or a greenish, yellowish discoloration of the skin, so suggestive of gallstones.

In themselves, these symptoms are not typical of the disease, and hence, a decisive diagnosis cannot be made on the symptoms alone.

Definite Diagnosis

In order to make a definite diagnosis of the diverticula, X-ray examination is required. The X-ray examination should include the entire gastro-intestinal tract and especially the gallbladder. Once the diverticula have been discovered in the X-ray plate, the doctor will decide whether or not they are responsible for the trouble because, as I have stated, not all diverticula cause symptoms.

When the diagnosis is certain, and it has been determined that the diverticula are responsible for the symptoms, an operation for their removal is sometimes advised.

Where the patient is in such poor condition that an operation cannot be carried out, medical measures, such as the use of a bland diet, the giving of mineral oil, and lying on the side after meals, are carried out. The bland diet is one which contains no highly-seasoned or bulky foods.

Diverticulitis is usually not a serious disorder, but when diagnosed it should receive prompt treatment along accepted lines.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. C.: If a large lump appeared in the breast during pregnancy and in a few months disappeared after nursing, what would be the reason?

Answer: The swelling might be due to a cyst or, possibly, to a blocked milk duct. The latter is the most probable cause.

CHAPTER THIRTY

JOHN spoke. "Where are you going?"

Anne looked at him now and suddenly her heart wanted to burst. She could feel her throat aching with tears but her voice was carefully calm. She even managed a faint smile.

"There are hotels."

"They're crowded."

"I can go somewhere for a few days. They take in transients."

John's gray eyes were driving into her. "You have no job."

"I'll get one."

"Have you any money?"

"Some."

He was silent for a moment. Then, "It, after Alec goes you haven't been able to land anything or you're having any trouble about anything, you must come back here."

"Yes! Promise us that!" Julia said.

Anne answered simply. "Thank you both very much."

She turned to go. John followed. Out in the hall before they got to the stairs, he spoke her name. "Anne."

She shook her head and moved on. His voice followed her. "I just wanted to say please let me know when you're ready."

She nodded without speaking or turning. Ahead of her, suddenly, loomed Alec at the top of the stairs.

"Anne!"

She shook her head again and started by him, but he caught her hand.

"I want to talk to you."

She looked up at him and now she was cool and quiet. "There's nothing more to say."

"But I want to explain! I don't want you to think—You've got to listen to me!"

"Let me go, please, Alec."

"But—"

CHAPTER THIRTY

JOHN spoke. "Where are you going?"

Anne looked at him now and suddenly her heart wanted to burst. She could feel her throat aching with tears but her voice was carefully calm. She even managed a faint smile.

"There are hotels."

"They're crowded."

"I can go somewhere for a few days. They take in transients."

John's gray eyes were driving into her. "You have no job."

"I'll get one."

"Have you any money?"

"Some."

He was silent for a moment.

Then, "It, after Alec goes to bed, must plan. She must think. The way she felt now she would like to leave tonight, bag and baggage, and never return. But of course that was impossible. She would need a moving van for all her stuff. And until she had found a place in New York, until Alec had gone and she could come back here to superintend the moving without running into him."

She would just take a bag, she decided. She would pack her trunk and leave it ready for the expressman to collect when she had an address. But tonight she would simply take a bag. If she hurried she could probably get the seven o'clock bus.

She worked feverishly, trying not to look ahead or back. Time enough for that later. She first packed her suitcase with immediate necessities, then, dragging her trunk from the back of the closet, she packed other things. Her skin clothes that she had worn here so much and would not need in the city. Her high boots and heavy sweaters. Her skates. Her box of summer clothes that she would want later. Her linens, all her sheets and pillow cases and towels, and the day-bed cover.

What a fool I have been!

But she mustn't think even yet.

Let's see now. There was still room in the tray for a few more things. She glanced around. Oh, her desk stuff! The blotter pad and the clock and her writing paper. Now what else? Perhaps a few books and some pictures and the curtains

Survey Shows Pickaway Farm Production Ranks High

County Among Top 7 In State

Corn, Wheat Totals Pace Local District

In four fields of livestock and corn production, Pickaway County ranks within the first seven of Ohio's 88 counties which lends ample proof that much of the state's farm wealth is home grown.

L. A. Best, county agriculture agent, said Tuesday this county stands fourth in hogs and corn, fifth in wheat and seventh in all types of cattle and calves.

Statistical proof of Pickaway County's high agriculture standing was released recently in a bulletin from the U. S. Department of Agriculture listing Ohio counties and their production totals.

Pickaway is grouped in district No. 5 with Delaware, Fairfield, Fayette, Franklin, Knox, Licking, Madison, Marion, Morrow, Ross and Union Counties.

In this district, Pickaway County ranked first in corn production and was led only by Darke, Clinton and Preble Counties in state output. This county's total 1947 corn crop totalled 3,840,000 bushels.

PICKAWAY was second in district hog production with 96,900 reported in the county. Heading this county in state hog production were Clinton, Madison and Preble Counties.

First in the district, Pickaway trailed in fifth place in the state in wheat production in 1947, the figures show. Production hit 1,091,000 bushel that year and was exceeded only by Seneca, Wood, Hancock and Henry Counties.

In all cattle and calves, Pickaway County was second in the district and seventh in the state. State leaders were Wayne, Darke, and Licking Counties. Statistics show Pickaway with 34,100 cattle and calves.

During the years 1945 and 1946, Pickaway County's annual farm income from livestock and crop sales hit $14,166,700, the agriculture report stated.

Hog sales accounted for 46 percent of that amount; wheat for 12 percent; dairy sales for 11 percent; cattle 8 percent, poultry, 8 percent; and corn for six percent. All other sales grouped totalled nine percent of the total $14,166,700 income.

In 1946, the Agriculture Adjustment Administration allotted $133,800 for farm assistance in Pickaway County. Under this bracket, the average farm income for that year was $7,165. Per acre income averaged $47.02, the department reported.

STOCK SHEEP production was less lucrative throughout the county compared to other sections specializing in mutton and wool. Here Pickaway stands eighth in the district and 25th in the state.

Still farther down the list was soybean production. Pickaway County dropped to 28th place, but held a firm eighth in the 12-county district.

While holding eighth place in

Full Revamping Of Penal System In Ohio Urged

COLUMBUS, May 18—A complete overhauling of Ohio's penal institutions with legislative enactment of a long-range program to replace the present out-dated system, was recommended to the Ohio Postwar Planning Commission today.

The report was made by a special committee of the Ohio Probation and Parole Association on the Mansfield reformatory. Tuscarawas County Chairman John H. Lammieke is chairman.

The committee said present administrative heads of the various institutions are doing a good job with the facilities available and that "it is surprising that results are as good as they are."

A four-point program was outlined:

1—Establishment of a central receiving institution to which all prisoners committed for indeterminate terms should be sent by the criminal courts for classification and separation.

2—Establishment of a number of institutions for such criminals as those insane, those on the borderline, those of normal mentality, and for delinquent boys under 18.

3—Until institutions can be provided, the Mansfield reformatory should provide a complete vocational training school; a well-equipped gymnasium; a modern library; the Grafton state farm of 2,500 acres should make a separate administrative unit; and there should be established an adequate guard training program.

4—If the state cannot provide for classification of prisoners and maintain proper training program, then serious consideration should be given to the question whether all indeterminate sentence laws should be repealed.

If you apply perfume directly to your skin, the fragrance will gradually disappear through evaporation. A famous perfumer suggests that better way is to apply a few drops of your favorite fragrance to the sleeve of a suit or coat. The scent is retained much longer.

Milk cows and heifers, this county dropped well beyond the half-way mark to 55th in the state.

Best pointed out, however, that while Pickaway County failed to contribute in some of the other brackets, oats, hay and poultry, the county's strong standing in major farm products held this area's income on a comparatively high level.

Survey Shows Pickaway Farm Production Ranks High

County Among Top 7 In State

Corn, Wheat Totals Pace Local District

In four fields of livestock and corn production, Pickaway County ranks within the first seven of Ohio's 88 counties which lends ample proof that much of the state's farm wealth is home grown.

L. A. Best, county agricultural agent, said Tuesday this county stands fourth in hogs and corn, fifth in wheat and seventh in all types of cattle and calves.

Statistical proof of Pickaway County's high agriculture standing was released recently in a bulletin from the U. S. Department of Agriculture listing Ohio counties and their production totals.

Pickaway is grouped in district No. 5 with Delaware, Fairfield, Fayette, Franklin, Knox, Licking, Madison, Marion, Morrow, Ross and Union Counties.

In this district, Pickaway County ranked first in corn production and was led only by Darke, Clinton and Preble Counties in state output. This county's total 1947 corn crop totalled 3,840,000 bushels.

PICKAWAY was second in district hog production with 96,900 reported in the county. Heading this county in state hog production were Clinton, Madison and Preble Counties.

First in the district, Pickaway trailed in fifth place in the state in wheat production in 1947, the figures show. Production hit 1,091,000 bushel that year and was exceeded only by Seneca, Wood, Hancock and Henry Counties.

In all cattle and calves, Pickaway County was second in the district and seventh in the state. State leaders were Wayne, Darke, and Licking Counties. Statistics show Pickaway with 34,100 cattle and calves.

During the years 1945 and 1946, Pickaway County's annual farm income from livestock and crop sales hit $14,166,700, the agriculture report stated.

Hog sales accounted for 46 percent of that amount; wheat for 12 percent; dairy sales for 11 percent; cattle 8 percent, poultry, 8 percent; and corn for six percent. All other sales grouped totalled nine percent of the total $14,166,700 income.

In 1946, the Agriculture Adjustment Administration allotted $133,800 for farm assistance in Pickaway County. Under this bracket, the average farm income for that year was $7,165. Per acre income averaged $47.02, the department reported.

STOCK SHEEP production was less lucrative throughout the county compared to other sections specializing in mutton and wool. Here Pickaway stands eighth in the district and 23rd in the state.

Still farther down the list was soybean production. Pickaway County dropped to 28th place, but held a firm eighth in the 12-county district.

Full Revamping Of Penal System In Ohio Urged

COLUMBUS, May 18—A complete overhauling of Ohio's penal institutions with legislative enactment of a long-range program to replace the present out-dated system, was recommended to the Ohio Postwar Planning Commission today.

The report was made by a special committee of the Ohio Probation and Parole Association on the Mansfield reformatory. Tuscarawas County Chairman John H. Lamneckie is chairman.

The committee said present administrative heads of the various institutions are doing a good job with the facilities available and that "it is surprising that results are as good as they are."

A four-point program was outlined:

1—Establishment of a central receiving institution to which all prisoners committed for indeterminate terms should be sent by the criminal courts for classification and separation.

2—Establishment of a number of institutions for such criminals as those insane, those on the borderline, those of normal mentality, and for delinquent boys under 18.

3—Until institutions can be provided, the Mansfield reformatory should provide a complete vocational training school; a well-equipped gymnasium; a modern library; the Grafton state farm of 2,500 acres should be made a separate administrative unit; and there should be established an adequate guard training program.

4—If the state cannot provide for classification of prisoners and maintain a proper training program, then serious consideration should be given to the question whether all indeterminate sentence laws should be repealed.

If you apply perfume directly to your skin, the fragrance will gradually disappear through evaporation. A famous perfumer suggests that a better way is to apply a few drops of your favorite fragrance to the sleeve of a suit or coat. The scent is retained much longer.

milk cows and heifers, this county dropped well beyond the half-way mark to 55th in the state.

Best pointed out, however, that while Pickaway County failed to contribute in some of the other brackets, oats, hay and poultry, the county's strong standing in major farm products held this area's income on a comparatively high level.

Columbus Tax Rumor Killed

COLUMBUS, May 18—Rumors that city council planned to increase the Columbus payroll corporation tax to as much as five percent were properly squelched today.

The council adopted a resolution specifically denying the rumors last night. The council even reserved the right to decrease the tax when "in its opinion such tax is providing revenues to adequately carry on the functions of city government."

Youngsters Collect Sales Tax Stamps, Buy Schools Film Units

Students of three Circleville elementary schools have purchased slide projectors for using educational strip film in their studies.

The money for the rather expensive machines was derived, according to Frank Fischer, superintendent of schools, from sales tax stamps which the children collect and from candy sales and scrap-paper drives.

Fischer said Tuesday Walnut and Franklin street schools each had two of the machines, and High street school had one, each school contributing to a lending library of the film strips.

The Circleville board of education has furthered the cause of the educational strips by purchasing some for each school, to build up the library, which has already been started by each school.

THE FILMS are shown only to one or two of the elementary rooms at one time, depending on the age level of the class, and because the schools have no auditoriums in which the whole school could gather.

Fischer said the films dealt with such topics as natural science, educational habits other such instructive subjects.

Corwin street school, which has easy access to the high school auditorium and picture machine, has turned its money to other fields.

Three pianos have been purchased by the children of the school, along with two radios and a stenciling machine.

In addition to the educational projects taken up by the four schools, each has contributed to

Man, 68, Held In Death Case

YOUNGSTOWN May 17—William Austin, 68, was held in Mahoning County jail today after he admittedly shot and killed Sam Barcovich, 28, who insisted on the recent high school band uniform campaign.

According to Fischer, "You'd be surprised at the amount of money the youngsters take in on stamps and such. I'm glad the teachers have chosen such fine ways of dispensing it."

4 Die In Lima Train Mishap

LIMA, May 18—One of the worst accidents to be reported in Allen County this year occurred yesterday when four persons were struck and killed by a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train 11 miles west of here.

The dead were Perry Stocklen, 43; Mrs. Alphretta Eiche, 34, and her two children, Paul and James, aged seven and eight, respectively.

They were in an automobile driven by Stocklen when the eastbound Manhattan Limited struck.

If you've ever done any shooting, you know that lining up the target in your sights isn't too hard.

What is tough is keeping your aim steady until the trigger is squeezed, and the bullet starts for the bull's-eye.

Saving money is a lot like that for most of us. It isn't too hard to save a little every once in a while. But to keep our aim steadily on the target of financial security — to save, regularly, some part of everything we earn — has always been a really tough job!

Yet today it needn't be! There's a new, easy, automatic way to save and to keep on saving until you hit the mark you're shooting for. It's buying U. S. Security Bonds on the Bond-A-Month Plan at your bank!

What's more, every dollar you put into Savings Bonds does two extra jobs. It helps keep your country strong and financially sound. And it makes more money for you — for the $75 you save today will grow to $100 in just 10 years!

So keep on buying every bond you can afford. And remember, the best way to buy is the steady way — the automatic way — on the Bond-A-Month Plan!
